

Merve Rumeysa Tapınç

Curriculum vitae

☎ 857-253-1261

✉ mtapinc@bu.edu

🌐 www.mervetapinc.com

Areas of Focus

Area Of Specialization

Ethics, Epistemology, Social and Political Philosophy

Area of Competence

Feminist Philosophy, 19th and 20th Century Continental Philosophy

Area of Teaching Competence

Medical Ethics, Ancient Greek Philosophy, Philosophy of Art

Academic Appointments

2024 Fall

Tufts University, Part-Time Lecturer

Education

2024

Boston University Ph.D. Philosophy

2012

Bogazici University M.A. Philosophy

2008

Istanbul Bilgi University B.A. Comparative Literature

Publications

Journal Articles and Book Chapters

2018

Tapınç, Merve R.(2018) Perceptual and Intuitional Experience in Merleau-Ponty and Bergson, Proceedings of the XXIII World Congress of Philosophy 27:129-136

2017

Tapınç, Merve R. (Invited & in Turkish) “Kuramsal Bilgi ve Algısal Deneyim”, Dunyanin Teni, ed. Zeynep Direk, Metis Yayınevi. (Title Translation: “Theoretical Knowledge and Perceptual Experience”)

2015

Tapınç, Merve R. (2015) “Perception and time-experience in Merleau-Ponty and Bergson”, Kaygı, , Uludağ Üniversitesi Fen-Edebiyat Fakültesi Felsefe Dergisi, 23, 163-184.

Works in Progress

- 2024 Tapınç, Merve R. “Knowing Your Commitments in Action” (Revise and Resubmit, Episteme)
- 2024 Tapınç, Merve R. “Doxastic Aspirations and Unalienated Self-Knowledge” (Under Review, American Philosophy Quarterly)
- 2024 Tapınç, Merve R. “Epistemology of Commitments: Knowledge of Fit Between Our Minds and Actions” (Under Review at Synthese)
- 2024 Tapınç, Merve R. “How Do We Have Delphic Self-Knowledge?” (Under Review, Philosophical Explorations, submitted in March 2024)
- 2024 Tapınç, Merve R. “Alienation and Avowal of Ethically Significant Beliefs” (Submitted to Inquiry, July 2024)
- 2023 Tapınç, Merve R. “Social Conditions of Self-Knowledge: Are Individuals Responsible for Cultural Ignorance? (Ready for Submission. Presented at Yale Early Career Ethic Conference April 2023)

Teaching Experience

MAIN INSTRUCTOR Tufts University

- 2024 Feminist Philosophy,
2024 Introduction to Philosophy

Boston University Metropolitan College

- 2024 Existentialism

Emerson College

- 2023 Free Will, Responsibility and Agency

Boston University

- 2018 Ancient Philosophy

Istanbul Technical University

- 2013-4 Philosophy of Art

TEACHING ASSISTANT

Boston University

- 2022 Existentialism, Walter Hopp
2021 Medical Ethics, Rachell Powell
2018-9 Intro to Ethics, Victor Kumar
2016 Introduction to Philosophy, David Roochnik

Boston University Questrom Business School of Business

- August 2020 Negotiations, Kristine Smith Crowe
Fall 2022 Ethical Leadership in the Global Economy, David Epstein

Harvard University

- 2019 Happiness, Susanna Rinard

Harvard Extension School

- 2021 Intro to Philosophy, Ben Roth

Presentations & Conferences

- Forthcoming “Doxastic Aspirations and Ethics of Belief”, Symposium, Central APA
- 2024 “Ethics of Belief and The Responsibility to Know Oneself”, 3rd Workshop in Analytic Philosophy, Organized by Poedat. <https://www.poedat.org/3-analitik-felsefe-calistayi/>

- 2024 “Epistemic Aspirations and Self-Knowledge” Boston University, Philosophy Department
- 2024 “Knowing Your Beliefs is Valuing Your Beliefs” Poster Presentation, Eastern APA
- 2023 A Multidisciplinary Roundtable on Marriage, Singledom, Family, Intimacy and Gender. Organized by Joanna Davidson and Dinah Hannaford: “Opting Out: Women messing with Marriage Around the World”. October 2023
- 2023 “Social Conditions of Moral Responsibility” Yale Early Career Ethics
- 2022 “Self-Knowledge of Commitments”, International Conference on Self-Consciousness and Self-Awareness ICSCSA on April 22-23, 2022 in London, United Kingdom
- 2019 “Bergson and the Singularity of Duration”, The Unique, the Singular and the Individual: The debate about the Non-Comparable, Claremont University, February 2019

APA Conference Comments

- 2022 Complicity and the problem of individual causal efficacy by Corey Katz Eastern APA
- 2021 Intellectual Courage and Inquisitive Reasons, Will Fleisher, Central APA

Awards, Fellowship and Grants

- 2020 PhD Summer Pilot Program by Post-Doctoral Affairs Summer (500$)
- 2019 Non-Service Summer Fellowship (5000$)
- 2016-2017 Boston University Dean’s Fellowship (20.000$)
- 2019 The Unique, the Singular and the Individual: The debate about the Non-Comparable, Claremont University (Grant for the Paper Presentation for the conference). (2000$)
- 2016 The Maria Stata Professorship Grant in Classical Greek Studies (2000$)

Equity, Diversity and Departmental Services

- 2023-2024 First-Gen Faculty Training/ Mentorship
- 2021-2023 Diversity and Climate Committee Officer
- 2021-2022 Minorities and Philosophy Program Coordinator

Interview

- 2021 Interview for BUCH as a Representative Grad Student from Philosophy Dept.

Research Assistant

- 2020 Research Assistant at BU Summer 2020.

- Prepared annotated bibliography for Daniel Dahlstrom’s research on the concept of expression, 1970-2022.

2018

Research Assistant at BU Spring 2018,

- Indexed for Juliet Floyd’s book: Wittgenstein and Turing, Philosophy of Logic and Mathematics

2014-2015

Research Assistant Tubitak Project 114K348, Concepts and Beliefs: From Perception to Action.

Graduate Coursework

*denotes audit

BOSTON UNIVERSITY

Philosophy of Mind, Walter Hopp
Topics in Aesthetics, Allen Speight*
Speculative Philosophy, Daniel Dahlstrom
Ancient Philosophy, David Roochnik
Plato, Theaetetus, Marc Gasser-Wingate
Philosophy of Language, Juliet Floyd
Moral Epistemology, Michaela McSweeney
Fanaticism and Ethics, Paul Katsafanas
History of Ethics, Aaron Garrett

HARVARD

Self-Knowledge, Richard Moran*
Philosophy of Action, Richard Moran*
Hume, Christine Korsgaard*

MIT

Feminist Thought, Sally Haslanger*

References

Walter Hopp

Sarah Paul

Professor of Philosophy

Assoc. Professor of Philosophy

Boston University

NYU Abu Dhabi

hopp@bu.edu

sarah.paul@nyu.edu

send.Hopp.5A939C86C0@interfoliodossier.com send.Paul.2B15232B7D@interfoliodossier.com

Daniel Dahlstrom
Professor of Philosophy
Boston University
dahlstro@bu.edu

send.Dahlstrom.35CB274580@interfoliodossier.com

Allen Speight
Professor of Philosophy
Boston University
casp8@bu.edu

send.Speight.11CC6D6D2B@interfoliodossier.com

Victor Kumar (Teaching Letter)
Assist. Professor of Philosophy
Boston University
Victor.c.kumar@gmail.com send.Kumar.96784EA483@interfoliodossier.com

Dissertation Summary

How do we know our morally significant beliefs and commitments that shape our character, as the Oracle of Delphi advises us to “Know Thyself”? We ordinarily both take ourselves to have and aspire to have certain beliefs and commitments. We might aspire to truly believe in gender equality and have commitment to write a book. It is also very important to us that we get these facts right about ourselves. Knowing which beliefs and commitments we hold, which we aspire to hold, and whether there is an epistemic gap between them, is an important component of personal integrity and wellbeing.

I identify two central challenges in achieving Delphic Self-Knowledge. One challenge is the problem of indifference which arises when agents know their dispositional beliefs and akratic actions but do not care about them. According to the problem, there is some proposition P about yourself such that (a) you are in possession of (robust) evidence that P but (b) you do not care about your belief that P. I discuss that the empiricist views, according to which, we know our beliefs by observing how we reason in relevant circumstances, faces the problem of indifference. The second challenge is the problem of epistemic irresponsibility, which arises when agents believe that they have a belief or a commitment on the basis of insufficient evidence from their conscious judgements and decisions. I discuss that the first-personal views face the problem of epistemic irresponsibility because they claim that judgement about what is true and decision about what to do are sufficient for self-knowledge of having a belief and a commitment.

I further argue that to account for a phenomenon of what I call “doxastic aspiration” which arises when moral agents aspire to have certain beliefs, we need an account of self-knowledge that avoids both the problem of indifference and epistemic irresponsibility. Empiricist theories defend a dispositional account of beliefs, yet, if epistemic aspirants are alienated from their dispositional beliefs, then those dispositional beliefs are not an expression of their ‘real self’. Aspirant self-knowers care about their beliefs, and if we care about our beliefs, we take responsibility for building those beliefs. Although the first personal views emphasize taking responsibility for our beliefs, I show that the attitude of judgement is neither an expression of what we care about nor a responsible means to form a belief.

I offer a self-knowledge account that bridges the gap between the first-personal and empiricist views by explaining both the significance of caring about one’s attitudes (thereby avoiding the problem of indifference), but also the significance of knowledge of carrying out responsibility for one's beliefs and intentions (thereby avoiding the problem of epistemic irresponsibility). I do this by arguing that contrary to what the contemporary literature on self-knowledge has highlighted, we need to appeal to a more nuanced diachronic attitude of "commitment" rather than an episodic attitude of "judgment," or gathering theoretical knowledge about one's beliefs. I argue that commitments as expressions of what we value distinguish beliefs we aspire to have from the alienated, dispositional beliefs. I go on to argue that because commitments do not involve know-how knowledge of what we do, we need to learn about how we can succeed to achieve our commitments. I conclude that we need knowledge of fit between what we take ourselves to be committed to and our actions, to know whether we in fact act in the way we are committed to.